

Calling for Junior Rapporteurs

Stockholm International Water Institute is looking for a team of junior rapporteurs to help with reporting on the latest trends, knowledge, and innovations discussed during sessions of World Water Week 2023.

Play an instrumental part of the reporting and looking-forward processes, bridging World Water Week with similar global events.

Who?

Master's, Ph.D. students or young professionals with a special interest in water, between age 18–35 years.

When?

Full working days during World Water Week held from 20–24 August 2023.

How?

Sessions are held online and on-site in Stockholm.

As a Junior Rapporteur, you will be distilling the pressing needs and ambitious missions into concrete conclusions and actions from a youth perspective.

About the position

This is a volunteer position that can be joined either online or on-site. Successful candidates are offered free registration and full access to the on-site conference (estimated value 10,000 SEK), which includes lunches, coffee, and social events. Online participation is subsidized by World Water Week partners and session organizers. Any other expenses (travel, accommodation, etc) as well as unexpected costs shall be borne by rapporteurs. By joining World Water Week, you will have numerous opportunities to network and develop your analytical skills under professional guidance of water experts and communicators.

Why apply?

- Opportunity to feed into the international water agenda at similar events.
- Gain social media competence, widen professional networks and highlight your presence at World Water Week.
- Network with the world's most prominent water professionals.

APPLY

Fill out the application form on worldwaterweek.org/about/junior-rapporteurs/apply by 10 April 2023. Join us to address the world's most pressing challenges under the theme Seeds of Change: Innovative Solutions for a Water-Wise World.

Note: We won't be accepting email applications.